

Measurement and Analysis Challenges of NASA's Future Life Science Missions

Robert J. Hansen
Deputy Director for Research
NASA Ames Research Center

Measurements and analyses of gene expression much more sophisticated than currently possible are of critical importance to NASA's future missions in Astrobiology and Gravitational Biology. Some of these unique challenges will be outlined, along with emerging measurement concepts and analysis methods that may hold promise for addressing these challenges.